I lead a national multidisciplinary team, of PBM Practitioners (Nurses and Biomedical Scientists). Their key role is to support colleagues in hospitals to implement and deliver Patient Blood Management. My managerial responsibilities include the Blood Stocks Management Scheme, National Comparative Audit team and the PBM education team.

My role involves working with key stakeholders to form a PBM strategy and to seek new opportunities to collaborate with the wider NHS to implement best practice and to provide cost effective healthcare.

I have worked in the NHS for over 30 years and have experience as unit manager of a haematology and bone marrow transplant unit, running cancer research trials and I became one of the first Transfusion Practitioners in England.
